To post a comment, please contact or register a new account. I just decided to start playing Minecraft again after a bunch of years and I migrated through my original Minecraft account to the Mojang account. I'm on Windows 10, which already has Minecraft installed, but when I open it, it's already logged into my Microsoft account, which is linked to another email and doesn't own Minecraft. I don't see any way to log in from this account and into my old account. Is there a way to do this so I don't have to buy a new copy of Minecraft? Thank you. The message was reported successfully. If multiple Minecraft usernames enter through the same computer user account, they can access each other's saved worlds. You can change that, although it requires a bit of advanced installation. To make things clear, the following three terms are used: Minecraft username is the name of your Minecraft character that your account uses. A computer user account is a computer account that you log in when you start your computer. Minecraft Launcher Configuration - You can make Minecraft work with different settings or in different versions using different configurations available from the Minecraft launcher (before you click Play). By default, most users will have a single configuration called Last Release, but you can customize any number of configurations. Windows (Java Edition) Minecraft create a world of saves and player data elsewhere than the default. If you do, you won't see the worlds of other people who use the same computer. For editing create a new launcher configuration: Start Minecraft Go to Startup Options and Click Add New New to the game directory option, and then specify a different file path (e.g. C: UsersStyv\AppDataRoaming.minecraft for C: UsersStyv\AppDataRoaming.minecraft2) Click Save Windows 10 Edition Besides changing the file path, you can also simply create another computer user account. Click Start, click Settings (cogwheel), go to accounts, and then click other users. Click Add Someone Else to this computer and fill in their information. You can create a user with a Microsoft account or make a local user without an account.
